

JUGGLING PROBABILITIES

Greg Warrington

University of Vermont

Thursday, April 7, 2016

5:00PM; 101 Jordan Hall

From the right perspective, everything is mathematical — even juggling. In this talk, I'll describe how juggling relates to traditional mathematical fields such as graph theory and look at what happens when a person starts juggling randomly. In doing so, I'll illustrate how these mathematical underpinnings can be useful to even accomplished jugglers. There will be numerous live demonstrations with the juggling of 0 to 7 objects.

UNIVERSITY OF
NOTRE DAME

College of Science