As technology advances in the 21st century, a wide variety of online tools are being created for use in math courses. Online homework systems, learning management systems (LMS), and lecture videos are all ways one can enhance and engage students. However, there are also disadvantages to every new online tool, even if it was created to make students’ (and instructors’) lives better. We will explore these tools with the hope to purposefully improve student education.